These sessions focused on strengthening understanding of examination workflows, digital assessment tools, and evaluation methodologies. Major training initiatives included workshops on online examination systems using Wheebox and Moodle-based question paper setting, enabling faculty to adopt technology-enabled assessment frameworks confidently and consistently.

The Office strengthened its examination ecosystem through key collaborations. The continued partnership with Wheebox supported the secure and efficient conduct of online examinations. Additionally, collaboration with the Bar Council of Tamil Nadu and Puducherry contributed to reinforcing evaluation standards and compliance in legal education, aligning assessments with professional and regulatory expectations.

In line with the University's focus on innovation, the Office undertook a pilot study with Smartail (Deepgrade) to explore AI-enabled assessment and evaluation techniques. This initiative examined the potential of data-driven and automated evaluation methods to enhance accuracy, consistency, and scalability in assessment processes.

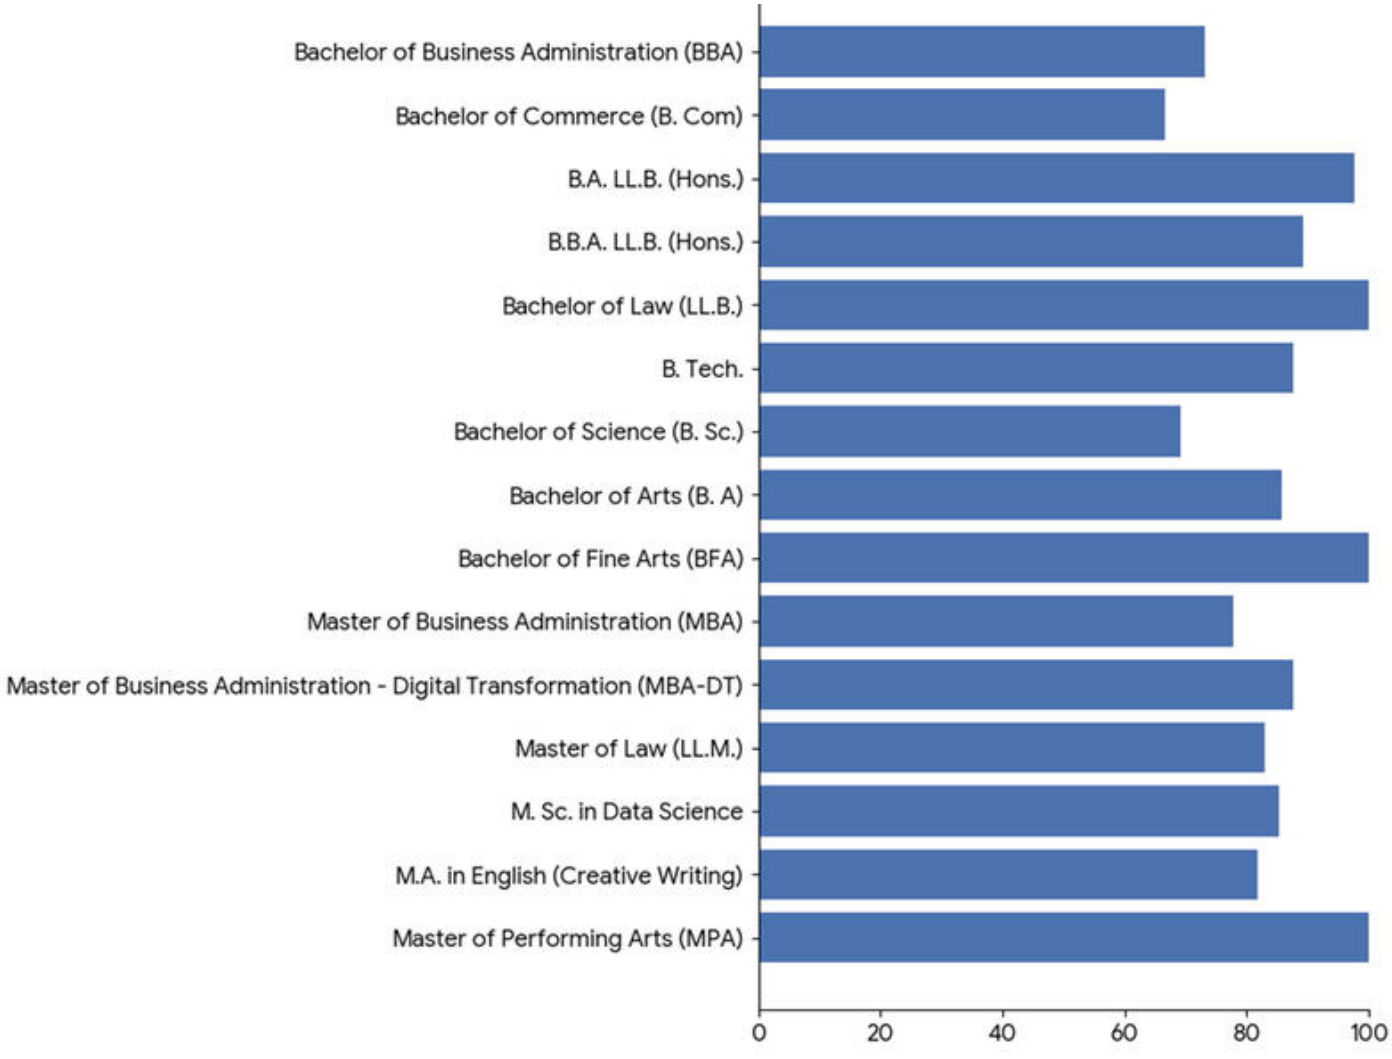

.To improve flexibility and learner-centricity, the Office introduced On-Demand Examinations, allowing students to choose examination timings within approved frameworks. A one-time uniform two-hour duration for Semester End Examinations (SEE) was also implemented across all batches to ensure consistency and academic equity..Significant process enhancements were introduced to streamline examination operations. These included the implementation of a structured invigilation schedule with clearly defined room allocations, improving coordination and examination-day efficiency. The adoption of centralised evaluation mechanisms further strengthened transparency, standardisation, and timely completion of assessment processes.

The Office also increased the emphasis on formative assessments, enabling continuous monitoring of student progress and supporting outcome-based education. This shift contributed to improved academic engagement and early identification of learning gaps.

Supporting flexible and blended learning pathways, the Office successfully facilitated credit transfer for NPTEL and SWAYAM courses, enabling students to integrate nationally recognised MOOCs into their academic programmes. The Office also efficiently managed the conduct of Semester End Examinations for NPTEL and SWAYAM learners, ensuring compliance with national guidelines and institutional standards.

Through systematic reforms, digital transformation, and innovative practices, the Office of the Registrar – Examinations and Evaluation has continued to enhance the robustness and credibility of Alliance University's assessment framework. Its initiatives during 2024–25 reflect a strong commitment to academic excellence, student-centric evaluation, and continuous improvement aligned with national and global best practices.

CORPORATE MENTORSHIP PROGRAM (C2C)

To prepare students to make a thoughtful and reasoned transition from their college experience into the corporate world and beyond.

Connects each student to an academic mentor and a corporate mentor. The academic mentor and the corporate mentor collaborate to prepare the student to achieve their professional goals.

Key Result 1: At least 33% of the students of the C2C Program will receive job offers of INR 10 LPA or better.

Key Result 2: The satisfaction level of students of the C2C Program will be at least 70% (in the aggregate – as measured in a satisfaction survey at the end of the C2C Program 2021 – 2023; Timeline: January 2023).

How does the C2C Program Work?

First week on campus, students of the MBA batch of 2021 – 2023 will have an opportunity to interact with all faculty members of the School of Business.

Every effort will be made to link each student to their academic mentor of first choice, as well as a corporate mentor appropriate to their (student's) professional goals.

A brief profile of the faculty members will be made available to all students.

Since each academic mentor can have a limited number of mentees (students), students will be linked to their second or third choice of academic mentor, if the students' first choice cannot be fulfilled.

On or before the due date and time (to be announced on the first day on campus) each student will choose three academic mentors.

Academic mentors will meet their mentees individually at least thrice a month during the first semester, and at least once a fortnight during the second and third semesters. The days and time of the meetings will be decided upon mutual convenience.

Each student will also furnish the sector or industry that they wish to be a part of, and the concentration area they propose to pursue. The information will be used to link the student with an appropriate corporate mentor.

Corporate mentors will meet their mentees (students) at least once a month throughout the program (8 meetings). The academic mentor will also be present during such meetings. The academic and corporate mentors will coordinate to achieve this objective.

TECHNOLOGY ENABLED LEARNING

The adoption of the technologies has not only improved operational efficiency but has also positioned Alliance University as a leader in the realm of technological innovation in education. We remain committed to staying at the forefront of technological advancements to provide our students with a world-class educational experience. With this objective Alliance University has initiated a dedicated directorate for Technology Enabled Learning

Academic Administration

The academic administration at Alliance University has undergone a significant transformation with the implementation of robust systems aimed at streamlining operations. Our Academic Management System (AMS) in the ERP integrates various components such as course planning, student registrations, faculty scheduling, and examination management. This system ensures real-time updates, reducing manual errors and providing administrators with accurate data for decision-making.

Competency & Outcome-Based Education

The OBE framework has been seamlessly integrated into our curriculum management system. This allows for the continuous monitoring and assessment of student learning outcomes, facilitating data-driven decisions for curriculum improvements. The system also provides a comprehensive view of student performance, enabling faculty to tailor teaching methodologies to meet specific learning needs.

Student Information System

Our Student Information System acts as a centralized hub for all student-related data, from admissions to graduation. It includes modules for enrolment, academic records, attendance tracking, and more. The SIS fosters improved communication between students, faculty, and administration, enhancing the overall student experience.

Blended Learning

The Alliance University fraternity demonstrates a keen interest in using Coursera, with 10,514 learners participating in 179,834 courses and dedicating 327,559 hours (Avg. 32 hours/learner) to learning since its inception, which strongly indicates a substantial and meaningful utilization of Coursera.

The completion of 135,512 courses signifies a substantial dedication to education and advancement throughout the university. It underscores how this initiative can foster personal development, augment team competencies, further company objectives, and benefit community and campus enhancements. Coursera is available at no cost to the Alliance community, which demonstrates a substantial and extensive positive result.

Engagement Excellence

Alliance University has strategically leveraged Coursera for Campus to add to its academic program with credit sharing and systematic skill development courses across disciplines. The integration has extended beyond the School of Engineering, having been rolled out successfully in the School of Liberal Arts and other schools, showcasing a whole institutional commitment to hybrid and innovative learning.
This process comprises selective curation and incorporation of courses of Coursera into the curriculum of the university, aligning the learning outcomes of the courses. These courses are not only incorporated as supporting material but as a part of the internal assessment. The credit equivalency was determined with respect to its value, learning effort, and congruence with the academic requirements of the university. This equivalence is achieved through a formalized process of self-learning, where students learn Coursera modules on their own within a stipulated duration, augmented by faculty support to contextualize the content and facilitated by a standardized evaluation process. The initiative reflects Alliance University's broader vision to:

· Bridge academia and industry by incorporating cutting-edge content from global platforms.

· Foster lifelong learning habits through digital tools,

· And equip students with skills and certifications that enhance their employability and academic depth.

Faculty Engagement

In Alliance University, instructors are adopting Coursera as a great platform for self-initiated learning and development. Their engagement on the platform is evidence of natural and spontaneous movement toward perpetual upskilling and interdisciplinary education. To bolster this vision, Alliance University is combining Coursera and like initiatives into a formal blended learning policy. This has been designed to advance faculty skills, placing them at the cutting edge of teaching techniques and developing subject areas.

The statistics speak for themselves: 537 faculty members have collectively taken more than 1,850 courses in a wide range of subjects, dedicating more than 10,000 hours to online learning—an average of 19 hours per faculty member. Such high participation speaks volumes to their commitment to professional development.

In a future-forward initiative, the university has also added self-learning indicators to faculty performance reviews. By acknowledging unique learning efforts through Key Performance Indicators (KPIs), Alliance University solidifies its mission of developing a dynamic, forward-looking academic community prepared to confront the constantly evolving challenges of higher education.

Customized Upskilling

Alliance University's emphasis on skill acquisition goes far beyond traditional areas like engineering and management. Faculty members in the different disciplines—covering law, liberal arts, and other non-technical subjects—are themselves actively pursuing Coursera for enhancing their knowledge and staying updated in an academic scenario that is rapidly evolving. For enabling an overall and integrated professional development plan, the university has devised 26 diverse learning paths. These include a wide range of subjects, going from new-generation courses like Machine Learning and Artificial Intelligence to innovative concepts, leadership, entrepreneurship,and the evolving role of technology in the areas of academics. Every learning trajectory is meticulously designed and gauged through tailor-made tests created in collaboration with Coursera's AI Builder. These evaluations are created in collaboration with experts in their respective domains and are diligently monitored by the university's Blended Learning team. This way, the learning process remains rigorous, relevant, and aligned to scholarly pursuits as well as industrial developments.

AU-STIC

Sophisticated Testing & Instrumentation Center

2024 - 25

AU-STIC comprises a team of researchers and postdoctoral and PhD students. The important work that we are focusing on is

1. Smart Food packaging films

Approximately 40% of synthetic plastics are used in packaging applications and among this 70% of the plastic is used for food packaging. After use, only 10% is recycled, with the rest being landfilled or ending up in the environment and eventually the sea. Therefore, it is worth using biodegradable plastics for manufacturing food packaging films. In our laboratory, we have used various biodegradable plastics such as starch, cellulose, chitosan, poly(3-hydroxybutyrate-co-3-hydroxyvalerate) and polyvinyl alcohol for manufacturing food packaging films. Additionally, we have incorporated other functionalities in the food packaging films, such as antimicrobial properties, improvement in physical properties, reduced oxygen and moisture transmission, real-time monitoring of food products, and detection of pathogen and food spoilage. This is achieved using external agents such as essential oil, natural agents, metal, metal oxide nanomaterials, graphene, carbon nanotubes, and quantum dots. More work is going on in our laboratory and in discussions with some food packaging industry to look into technological applications of our materials.

2. Water purification

Only one percentage of the water on the earth is pure and it is under threat due to the increasing human population. As a result, it is important to purify water for the survival of human beings. Water pollution from dyes and heavy metals needs to be addressed by removing them from wastewater. In our laboratory, we have implemented various methods such as adsorption, ion exchange, and polymer membrane separation using environmentally friendly materials to purify water. In an interesting project, we have produced graphene nanoplatelets from discarded nails, which are used to absorb arsenic. Additionally, we have developed fully biodegradable plastic-based composite films with different biopolymers and nanofillers for removing cationic and anionic dyes through ion exchange and adsorption methods. More studies are ongoing for the development of polymeric membranes and composites for the removal of bacteria, and inorganic and organic toxic material

3. Biopolymers for composite industry.

Synthetic fibers like glass, Kevlar, and carbon fibers have been traditionally used to create composites for advanced applications in aerospace, automotive, electronics, sports, and more. This is because synthetic fibers offer high strength, hydrophobicity, and compatibility with plastics. However, it is important to note that synthetic fibers and polymers used in composites are highly toxic, nonbiodegradable, non-recyclable, and generate CO2 during production. Considering the Paris Climate Agreement's target of achieving zero CO2 emissions by 2050, there is a growing need to explore alternatives to synthetic fibers.

Plant fibers are emerging as promising substitutes for synthetic fibers due to their low cost, biodegradability, non-toxic nature, and recyclability. As a result, there is an increasing trend in using plant fibers in the production of composites for advanced applications. Additionally, many synthetic polymers are now being replaced by biodegradable plastics, such as bioepoxy resin/plant fiber composites and the use of PLA or PLA-based composites instead of PP.

Our research team has been actively involved in developing nanofiber, microfiber, and macrofiber/fabric from various plant fibers, utilizing them as reinforcement in biobased thermoset and thermoplastic polymers. Furthermore, we have conducted accelerated weathering studies behavior to investigate the long-term performance of both thermoset and thermoplastic-reinforced plant fiber composites, which have shown that the thermomechanical and physical properties remain intact even after weathering tests. These findings suggest that these composites can be effectively used for structural applications.

4. Smart biodegradable self-healing plastics and plastic coatings.

We have employed various methods to achieve the self-healing of polymers on a laboratory scale. We are currently working on developing self-healing polymer coatings using bioepoxy resin, nanofillers, UV initiators, and more. Our research has shown that scratches can be healed by UV light.

5. Other works

In addition to the aforementioned work, our research also focuses on making nanomaterials with unique functionalities from waste materials for applications such as green batteries, CO2 adsorption, water purification, and more. We are also actively involved in the development of green shape memory polymers and EMI shielding materials for space applications.

Inaugural

FUELING INDIA'S HYDROGEN RESEARCH

Hosting a Distinguished Series of Eminent Personalities on Hydrogen Fuel Technologies and Future Trends

As part of its commitment to national priorities in sustainability, clean energy, and advanced technology, Alliance University hosted a distinguished national-level workshop on "Hydrogen Fuel Technologies and Future Trends", bringing together an exceptional series of eminent leaders, policymakers, scientists, industry captains, and academic experts from across India. The event positioned the University as a convening platform for strategic dialogue on hydrogen technologies aligned with India's National Green Hydrogen Mission and the long-term goal of Net Zero emissions by 2070.

The workshop was marked by the presence and active participation of some of the most eminent personalities in India's science, technology, and policy ecosystem. The inaugural and plenary sessions featured nationally and internationally respected leaders who have played defining roles in shaping India's technological trajectory.

Dr. V. Narayanan, Chairman, Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO), delivered the Chief Guest address, articulating hydrogen as a strategic enabler of sustainability and innovation, rather than merely an alternative fuel. Drawing on India's globally acknowledged achievements in cryogenic and space technologies, he emphasized how these competencies can be translated into terrestrial hydrogen applications across mobility, industry, and power generation. His address underscored the critical importance of hydrogen safety, calling for the development of millisecond-response leak detection systems and robust standards as foundational enablers for large-scale adoption. He also outlined a realistic national pathway for reducing hydrogen production costs to USD 1/kg, highlighting technology scale-up, indigenization, and manufacturing leadership.

The workshop was further enriched by the presence of Dr. N. Kalaiselvi, Director General, Council of Scientific and Industrial Research (CSIR) and Secretary, DSIR, who offered a powerful conceptual framing by describing hydrogen as the "Ganapati of the periodic table"—a versatile and central element capable of enabling solutions across multiple sectors. Her address emphasized focused national prioritization, indigenous development of critical components such as PEM membranes and catalysts, and the importance of long-term academia–industry consortia to convert scientific knowledge into deployable technologies.

Adding a strong policy and strategic dimension, Dr. V. K. Saraswat, Hon'ble Member, NITI Aayog and Chairman, The Combustion Institute – Indian Section, shared insights from India's hydrogen policy journey and called for pragmatic, execution-oriented approaches. He highlighted hydrogen internal combustion engines as a low-hanging yet high-impact opportunity for rapid decarbonization of heavy-duty transport and marine sectors, advocating immediate action over theoretical perfection.

The workshop featured a series of high-impact technical and strategic sessions led by senior leaders from industry and premier academic institutions, reinforcing Alliance University's role as a national hub for cross-sectoral engagement.

Hosting a Distinguished Series of Eminent Personalities on Hydrogen Fuel Technologies and Future Trends

Senior executives from Ashok Leyland, Volvo Group, Caterpillar, and Honeywell shared real-world deployment experiences, demonstrating that hydrogen technologies are transitioning from laboratories to commercial reality. Notably, industry presentations highlighted hydrogen-powered trucks, power generation systems, fuel cell applications, and aviation and maritime pathways—underscoring that decarbonization can be achieved without compromising performance, reliability, or safety.

Equally distinguished were the contributions from leading academic institutions including IISc Bengaluru, IIT Madras, IIT Delhi, and DRDO, whose eminent professors and scientists presented cutting-edge research in hydrogen combustion, fuel flexibility, gas turbines, internal combustion engines, rotating detonation engines, and AI-enabled combustion modelling. These sessions demonstrated India's growing depth in fundamental science, advanced diagnostics, and next-generation engineering, while also emphasizing translational research and industry relevance.

Through this workshop, Alliance University demonstrated its institutional capability to host and curate a series of eminent personalities on a nationally critical theme, facilitating meaningful dialogue between policymakers, scientists, industry leaders, and scholars. ABOUT

AIU CENTENARY LECTURE SERIES

The Association of Indian Universities (AIU), established in 1925, is one of the world's oldest higher education associations. For 100 years, AIU has played a critical role in:

- Promoting cooperation among universities,
- Equating foreign degrees with Indian standards,
- Organizing academic, cultural, and sports programs, and
- Facilitating academic policies at the national and global levels.

The AIU Centenary Lecture Series is part of its 100-year celebrations, with the aim of bringing together leading voices from academia, industry, culture, and policy to deliberate on the future of higher education in India and beyond.

Alliance University had the honor of hosting one Lecture of this historic series, featuring lectures on Reimagining Education and Quantum Computing.

The AIU Centenary Lecture Series hosted at Alliance University commenced with an invocation and the lighting of the lamp, setting a solemn and inspiring tone for the day. The event drew together the university's leadership, faculty, students, and distinguished guests from the Association of Indian Universities (AIU). The Vice Chancellor extended a warm welcome, positioning the program as both a celebration of AIU's hundred-year journey and a forward-looking dialogue on the future of higher education. It was emphasized that the centenary should not merely be seen as a commemoration of the past but as an opportunity to collectively envision the role Indian universities must play in shaping the nation's growth trajectory towards 2047. The overall atmosphere was one of academic enthusiasm and anticipation, as participants prepared to engage with ideas that brought together the richness of India's traditions and the promise of emerging global innovations.

Address by Vice Chancellor

In his address, the Vice Chancellor underscored the significance of Alliance University being chosen as a host institution for the Centenary Lecture.He remarked that education, in its truest sense, must transcend the delivery of degrees and credentials to equip students with the power of critical thinking and problem-solving. He urged the student community not to depend excessively on AI tools such as ChatGPT, warning that over-reliance could dilute their ability to think independently and analytically. Instead, he encouraged them to use such tools responsibly, as aids that complement human creativity and reasoning.

The Vice Chancellor also reaffirmed Alliance University's commitment to aligning its educational and research initiatives with India's national missions, particularly the National Quantum Mission, the Hydrogen Mission, and the Artificial Intelligence Mission. He explained that the university seeks to remain a forward-looking institution, one that balances academic excellence with social responsibility.

At the same time, he urged students to remain grounded, to recognize the sacrifices of their parents, and to cultivate gratitude, discipline, and dedication in their academic pursuits. His words set the context for the day's proceedings, blending reflections on values with a vision for future readiness.

Address by Guest of Honor

The Guest of Honor, Dr. Alok Kumar Mishra, Joint Secretary of AIU, delivered keynote that reflected both on AIU's past achievements and its continuing role in the future of Indian higher education. He began by outlining the history of the Association, established in 1925, and highlighted its status as the second oldest and largest higher education network body in the world. He explained AIU's wide-ranging responsibilities, from granting equivalence to foreign degrees, to organizing national-level sports and cultural events, and to representing Indian universities in international forums and agreements.

Dr. Mishra also spoke of the upcoming structural reforms in higher education, particularly the establishment of the Higher Education Commission of India (HECI), which will take over the function of degree equivalence. Even with these changes, he stressed that AIU would continue to play a crucial role in fostering research collaboration, academic development, and policy dialogue. Addressing the students directly, he encouraged them to dedicate themselves to building intellectual strength and practical wisdom. He emphasized that their role in nation-building was indispensable, urging them to contribute meaningfully to their chosen fields as India advances toward its centenary celebrations in 2047. Dr. Mishra introduced the AIU Centenary Lecture Series as a platform designed to encourage reimagining education through the insights of eminent thinkers, thereby reaffirming AIU's commitment to dialogue, reform, and academic progress

Reimagine Education

The first session was designed to place education within the broader cultural and intellectual traditions of India. At a time when global education systems are heavily shaped by technology and market forces, the objective was to revisit the Indian Knowledge Systems (IKS), the role of arts, and the Gandhian vision of holistic learning as resources for reimagining the future of education. The session sought to create a dialogue on how universities could integrate indigenous practices and values while also preparing students for the challenges of a rapidly changing world.

Another objective of this session was to balance skill development with character formation. The speakers were invited to demonstrate how education can move beyond its narrow focus on examinations and employability, and instead nurture creativity, empathy, sustainability, and ethical responsibility. By foregrounding arts and Gandhian experiments with education, the session emphasized that India's historical experiences and cultural richness still hold solutions to modern educational dilemmas.

The larger aim was to inspire students and faculty to think of education as a tool for nation-building, cultural preservation, and personal growth, not just professional advancement. The session was therefore positioned as a call to look inward—at India's traditions and values—while simultaneously looking outward to engage with global challenges.

Quantum Computing: The Future

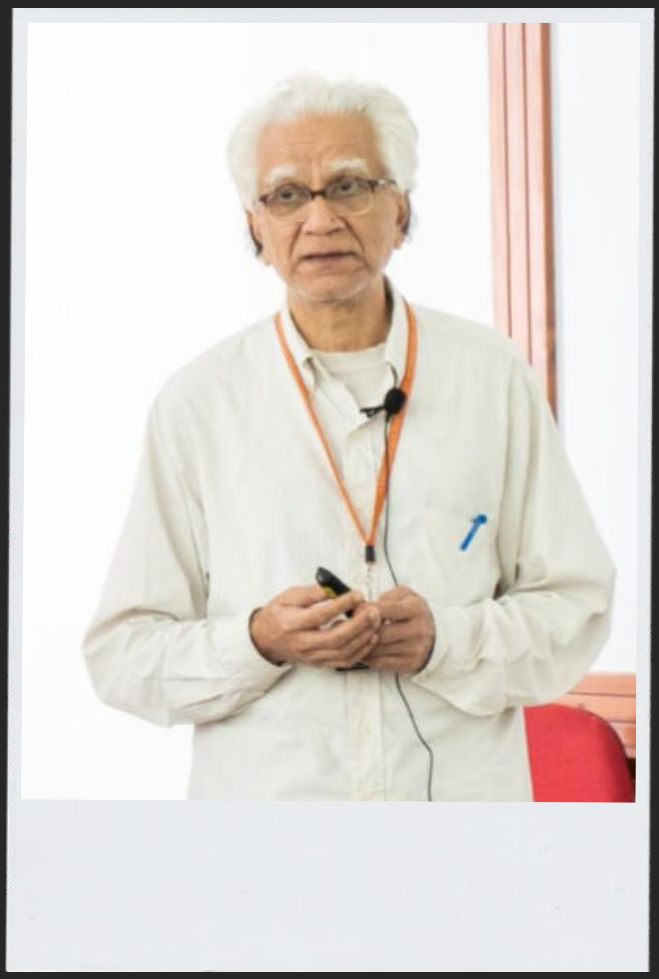

The session was conceived to introduce participants to one of the most significant technological frontiers of the 21st century: quantum computing. The objective was to provide clarity on the fundamental principles of quantum mechanics applied to computing, and to explain why this technology is considered transformative in areas ranging from cryptography to medical imaging. With India launching the National Quantum Mission, the session also aimed to situate the discussion within the country's strategic and developmental priorities.

A second objective of this session was to help the audience understand the practical challenges and opportunities surrounding quantum technologies. Unlike the popular perception that quantum computers will universally replace classical systems, the session sought to highlight a more nuanced reality: that quantum advantage is problem-specific, costly to implement, and will initially complement rather than replace classical computing. By drawing on the experiences of leading institutions like IISc and C-DAC, the lectures were designed to present a balanced picture of both possibilities and limitations.

This session aimed to spark curiosity among students and faculty about cutting-edge research, while underlining the importance of indigenous capacity building, collaborations, and strategic vision for India's future in this field. It emphasized that India's educational institutions must not only consume global knowledge but also produce new knowledge and technologies that will shape the future of science and national security.

Lecture 3 - Quatum Computing: Directions and Prospects

Prof. Apoorva D. Patel, Professor at the Indian Institute of Science, Bengaluru, delivered the first lecture of this session. He began by explaining that the origins of quantum technology lay not in the quest for faster computing devices, but in the need to understand physical phenomena that classical theories could not explain. He cautioned that quantum advantage is problem-dependent; only certain categories of problems can be solved more efficiently by quantum computers than classical ones. Prof. Patel highlighted India's challenges in this domain, including limited infrastructure, insufficient manpower, and the absence of large-scale collaborative research efforts. He pointed out that while global research papers often involve teams of 50-100 researchers, India has yet to build similar collaborative momentum. He also raised concerns about the security implications of high-level quantum technologies. To address these challenges, he proposed the creation of a dedicated institution modeled on ISRO, which would bring together scientists to guide long-term research and innovation in quantum technology. His lecture underlined the urgency of building indigenous capacity and preparing India strategically for the quantum era

Lecture 4 - " "Quantum Computing: Applications"

The second lecture of this session was delivered by Mr. Bijoy M. B., Joint Director of C-DAC. Mr. Bijoy explained the fundamentals of quantum computing, beginning with the contrast between classical bits and quantum bits (qubits), which can exist in superposition and exhibit entanglement. He discussed the role of quantum gates such as H, X, Y, Z, CNOT, and CCNOT, which are the building blocks of quantum circuits. He elaborated on the wide-ranging applications of quantum computing in cryptography, molecular simulations, high-precision sensors, and medical imaging systems. Mr. Bijoy also described C-DAC's pioneering contributions in the field, particularly the development of quantum simulators like QSIM and QUniverse, which allow researchers to test algorithms in the absence of physical hardware. He announced C-DAC's plan to establish a 50-100 qubit physical quantum computer within the next few years, which would position India strongly in the global quantum race. Concluding his lecture, he emphasized that quantum computing will not replace classical computing but will coexist with it in a hybrid model, where each system complements the other for optimal problem-solving Session II thus provided participants with both a conceptual foundation and a practical perspective on quantum computing. Prof. Patel's insights on policy and capacity building were complemented by Mr. Bijoy's technical explanation and institutional roadmap, together presenting a comprehensive picture of the future possibilities and challenges of quantum technologies.

Grounded in the disciplines of movement, rhythm, sound, and visual storytelling, it provides a platform for both students and faculty to engage deeply with the evolving practices of the arts.

The establishment of Kalataranga reflects Alliance University's broader vision of holistic education, where the arts are regarded as essential to intellectual and personal development. CELEBRATION OF INTERNATIONAL YOGA DAY

Alliance University marked the International Day of Yoga with an engaging and reflective session themed “From Sound to Silence.” The event brought together students, faculty, and staff from various departments, creating a shared space for wellness, mindfulness, and inner awareness. The atmosphere on campus was energised with enthusiasm as members of the university community came together to experience the benefits of yoga as a collective practice.

The session was conducted by Prof. Arun Shankar, Assistant Professor and certified Yoga instructor from The Art of Living Foundation. With his expertise and calm guidance, participants were introduced to the foundational elements of yoga. The session began with warm-up activities that involved vocal expressions, body loosening movements, and rhythmic exercises. These activities helped release physical tension and prepared the body and mind for deeper engagement with the practice.

Participants were then guided through a structured sequence of energising yoga postures, including Ardha Padmasana, Dhanurasana, and Makarasana. Each asana was demonstrated with clarity and explained in terms of its physical and mental health benefits. Prof. Shankar encouraged participants to focus on the connection between breath and movement, highlighting how awareness in practice can lead to improved concentration, reduced stress, and enhanced flexibility.

As the session progressed, participants were gradually led into more inward-focused practices. The yoga postures gave way to the deeply restorative Yoga Nidra, a guided relaxation technique that promotes deep rest and awareness. This was followed by a period of silent meditation, allowing participants to enter a state of stillness and self-reflection. The session beautifully captured the day’s theme—“From Sound to Silence”—guiding attendees from active expression to peaceful introspection.

The celebration served as a reminder of the importance of integrating yoga and mindfulness into daily routines. It reinforced Alliance University’s commitment to promoting holistic health and well-being on campus. By offering opportunities for both physical movement and mental stillness, the university continues to support the development of a balanced and healthy academic environment that values the well-being of every individual.

FACULTY OF LAW & POLICY STUDIES

The "Faculty of Law & Policy studies" section in the annual report provides a comprehensive overview of faculty achievements, research endeavors, and academic activities within the domain of law. It showcases the commitment to excellence and contributions made by the faculty members in the field of legal education and scholarship.

Academic Activities

The Alliance School of Law undertook extensive academic activities during the academic year 2024–2025 with the objective of delivering rigorous, contemporary, and practice-oriented legal education. The school adopted an outcome-based education framework that integrates doctrinal legal instruction with experiential, clinical, and skill-based learning. Academic delivery was conducted through a blended model comprising classroom lectures, seminars, case law discussions, problem-based learning, drafting exercises, presentations, and continuous assessments.

The curriculum across BA LLB, BBA LLB, LLB, LLM, and PhD programmes was designed to ensure a balanced development of theoretical foundations and professional competencies. Faculty members emphasized critical legal reasoning, statutory interpretation, comparative legal analysis, and application of law to real-life scenarios. Classroom engagement was enriched through discussion of recent judicial pronouncements, legislative developments, policy reforms, and international legal trends.

Clinical legal education formed an integral part of the academic structure. Students actively participated in legal aid initiatives, drafting clinics, research assignments, and simulated court exercises. These activities enhanced students' understanding of procedural law, client counselling, professional ethics, and access to justice mechanisms. Continuous internal assessments, written assignments, presentations, and viva voce evaluations ensured systematic monitoring of learning outcomes.

The school also encouraged interdisciplinary learning by integrating concepts from economics, management, technology, sociology, and public policy into legal education. This approach enabled students to appreciate the broader social, economic, and institutional contexts in which law operates. Academic mentoring, faculty interaction, and academic advising further supported student learning and progression.

Overall, the academic activities during the year significantly contributed to strengthening students' analytical abilities, research orientation, drafting skills, advocacy competence, and professional ethics, thereby preparing them for diverse legal careers in litigation, corporate practice, academia, public service, and research.

The comprehensive academic, co-curricular, and research activities undertaken during the academic year 2024–2025 significantly contributed to the holistic development of students. Graduates of the Alliance School of Law demonstrated enhanced legal reasoning, research competence, drafting proficiency, ethical awareness, and professional readiness.

The school's sustained focus on experiential learning, research engagement, and industry interaction ensured that students were well-prepared for diverse legal careers and higher academic pursuits.

Training Programmes, Workshops and Capacity Building

The Alliance School of Law placed strong emphasis on capacity building through structured training programmes and workshops aimed at enhancing practical legal skills, professional competence, and technological literacy. These initiatives enabled students to gain hands-on exposure to drafting, pleading, conveyancing, taxation, intellectual property, and legal research tools essential for modern legal practice.

Conferences and Seminars

The school actively promoted academic discourse and research culture through the organization of national and international conferences and seminars. These platforms enabled interaction among academicians, legal professionals, policymakers, and students, fostering critical engagement with contemporary legal and social issues.

CENTER OF EXCELLENCE IN PUBLIC POLICY, SUSTAINABILITY, AND ESG RESEARCH

The Center of Excellence in Public Policy, Sustainability, and ESG Research aims to inspire social change through academic excellence by conducting evidence-based, interdisciplinary research in ESG, sustainability, and public policy. Its mission is to foster a culture of sustainable and inclusive policies, focusing on multidisciplinary research that addresses global issues such as climate change, social development, and economic justice. The center seeks to support the national vision of Viksit Bharat 2047, create intervention strategies at the local level, and provide political leaders with tools for effective decision-making, campaign strategies, and policy analysis, while contributing to scientific research on diverse societal challenges.

The Centre of Excellence (CoE) in Public Policy, Sustainability and ESG Research at Alliance University has undertaken a focused portfolio of policy paper projects and working papers addressing pressing national and global policy challenges. These studies are grounded in empirical research, doctrinal analysis, and community-based fieldwork, and are designed to inform evidence-based policymaking across environmental governance, technology regulation, social equity, climate resilience, public health, and sustainable development.

Environmental Governance, Climate, and Sustainability

A major thrust of the CoE's work lies in environmental policy and climate governance. The study on International Sports Events and Environmental Impact provides one of the first empirical assessments in India of the environmental externalities of mega sporting events. By examining traffic congestion, air quality deterioration, and waste generation during major matches in Bengaluru and Mumbai, the research demonstrates significant spikes in vehicular movement (up to 326%), sharp declines in air quality, and a four-to-six-fold increase in waste generation. The study offers critical insights for framing sustainable event management policies that balance economic benefits with environmental responsibility.

Complementing this, research on Electoral Choices and Climate Change investigates whether climate concerns influence voting behaviour in India. Based on a large-scale survey in Anekal Taluk prior to the 2024 general elections, the study reveals that voters prioritize immediate socio-economic concerns such as employment and inflation over climate issues, and that political parties similarly underplay climate agendas. The findings underline the need to integrate climate policies into electoral narratives in ways that align environmental sustainability with development and livelihood priorities.

CENTER OF EXCELLENCE IN PUBLIC POLICY, SUSTAINABILITY, AND ESG RESEARCH

Further advancing climate resilience, the Nilgiris Biosphere Reserve study documents how indigenous knowledge systems of Particularly Vulnerable Tribal Groups contribute to ecosystem-based climate adaptation. Traditional land use, agroforestry, and forest management practices were found to enhance carbon sequestration, biodiversity, and food security. At the same time, the research highlights a generational disconnect threatening the continuity of these practices, reinforcing the policy imperative to integrate indigenous knowledge into formal climate adaptation frameworks.

Law, Technology, and Emerging Regulatory Challenges

The CoE has also made significant contributions to technology and legal policy. The study on AI and Copyright Law addresses the growing legal uncertainty surrounding authorship, ownership, and accountability in AI-generated creative works. By proposing a Three-Stage Model based on levels of AI involvement, the research offers a structured framework for attribution, revenue sharing, and liability, contributing to debates on modernizing copyright regimes in the age of artificial intelligence.
Extending the technology policy discourse, the project on AI-Powered Pricing in India's E-commerce Landscape examines algorithmic pricing through legal, economic, and ethical lenses. Anchored in the visions of Aatma Nirbhar Bharat and Viksit Bharat@2047, the study seeks to balance innovation with consumer protection and indigenous industry promotion. It aims to guide policymakers in developing responsible AI governance frameworks suitable for emerging digital economies.

Criminal Justice, Policing, and Environmental Harm

The policy paper on Green Criminology and Environmental Crimes re-examines conventional approaches to criminalization of environmental harm. Through empirical insights, it proposes two conceptual models: a harm-based framework distinguishing environmental damage from crime, and a "see-saw model" positioning the state as a balancing force between development and sustainability. The study advocates context-sensitive green policing and governance mechanisms that reduce conflict while safeguarding both ecological and human interests.

CENTER OF EXCELLENCE IN PUBLIC POLICY, SUSTAINABILITY, AND ESG RESEARCH

Public Health, Nutrition, and Social Policy

The CoE's research on Food Fortification Policy in India critically evaluates iron-fortified rice distribution through the Public Distribution System. Drawing on participatory surveys in Jharkhand, the study identifies widespread misconceptions, low awareness, and potential health risks for vulnerable populations. It argues against mandatory fortification and recommends a voluntary, rights-based approach that integrates traditional nutrition practices while safeguarding public health.

In the domain of early childhood development, the working paper on Strengthening Anganwadi Centres in Karnataka proposes systemic reforms aligned with NEP 2020 and Poshan 2.0. The study emphasizes capacity building of Anganwadi workers, improved nutrition delivery, phased co-location with primary schools, and real-time monitoring systems. The project aims to inform scalable policy interventions benefiting over 1.36 million children in the state.

Gender, Education, and Social Equity

Addressing social justice and inclusion, the research on Social Norms and Girls' Education examines how entrenched cultural practices in Kashmir and Punjab limit girls' access to higher education. The study introduces the Social Norms Change and Resistance Theory (SNCRT), highlighting how norm change is contested and nonlinear. It underscores the need for coordinated state and civil society interventions to dismantle structural barriers to girls' education.

Similarly, the case study on Women Entrepreneurs in Kashmir explores household-level constraints, socio-political instability, and limited institutional support affecting women's entrepreneurship. By documenting coping strategies and resilience, the research contributes to policy discussions on inclusive entrepreneurship in conflict-affected regions.

Governance, Global Policy, and Institutional Innovation

The CoE's working paper Trump@100 offers a systematic policy analysis of the first 200 days of Donald Trump's second-term presidency, covering foreign policy, climate deregulation, economic reforms, and trade policies. The study provides insights into policy continuity and adaptation in a volatile global governance context.

Finally, the University SDG Assessment Tool project represents an institutional policy innovation, mapping all UN SDGs, targets, and indicators into the higher education ecosystem. The project aims to deliver a digital assessment and monitoring tool enabling universities to track, report, and strengthen their contributions to the UN 2030 Agenda.

Key Highlights

1. Empowering Women of Hakki Pikki Village through Vocational Training: Alliance Kaushalya Spandana

In a powerful demonstration of community engagement and social responsibility, Alliance University launched the Alliance Kaushalya Spandana initiative as part of its International Women's Day Celebration 2025, in collaboration with the Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) Team. This initiative aims to empower women from the Hakki Pikki Village through skill development and self-reliance.

This CSR initiative focuses on offering vocational training in sewing machine operation to help women achieve financial independence and improve their livelihoods.

The core of the Alliance Kaushalya Spandana program is a comprehensive training course designed to equip women in Hakki Pikki Village with essential skills in sewing and tailoring. By integrating both theoretical knowledge and practical experience, the program prepares participants to operate sewing machines effectively, offering them a pathway to self-sufficiency and economic independence.

The sewing machine training program consists of a structured certificate course that covers various facets of tailoring, from basic techniques to more advanced skills. The curriculum is designed to ensure that participants receive a holistic education on the craft.

Impact and Empowerment

Upon completing the training, 20 selected participants from the Hakki Pikki community will receive sewing machines, donated to them as part of the initiative.
The aim is not only to provide vocational skills but also to foster a sense of self-reliance and confidence among the women. With newly acquired skills and access to essential tools, these women can increase their income-generating potential and improve their socio-economic status within their community.

Building a Sustainable Future
The Alliance Kaushalya Spandana program is designed to have a lasting impact on the lives of women in Hakki Pikki Village. By providing vocational training, Alliance University is not only offering immediate support to the participants but also laying the groundwork for long-term success and empowerment. As these women acquire the necessary skills and tools, they will be better equipped to face challenges, support their families, and contribute positively to the local economy.

The Alliance Kaushalya Spandana initiative stands as a testament to the power of skill development in transforming lives. Launched under the International Women's Day 2025 celebration in collaboration with the CSR Team, it underscores Alliance University's commitment to social responsibility and sustainable development. Change challenge: New criminal laws confound campuses

TIMES NEWS NETWORK

Bengaluru: The first semester exams after the new criminal laws were introduced in the country saw undergraduate law students grappling with challenges, including the absence of reliable academic resources and a lack of authoritative interpretation.

The new criminal laws were implemented on July 1, 2024. The Indian Penal Code (IPC) of 1860, Code of Criminal Procedure (CrPC) of 1973, and Indian Evidence Act (IEA) of 1872 were replaced by Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita (BNS), Bharatiya Nagarik Suraksha Sanhita (BNSS) and the Bharatiya Sakshya Adhiniyam (BSA), respectively.

The absence of reliable academic resources and authoritative interpretations have led to conflicting views on topics such as community service, intrusion and organised crime, say colleges.

A semester into the introduction of the new laws, TOI looked at the challenges students faced as they wrote the first-semester exam recently.

"The preconceived notions of professors and students about certain sections and topics are difficult to erase," said Kavya Hebbar, full-time faculty, University Law College and Department of Studies in Law, Bangalore University.

> Everything that was previously learned now needs to be unlearned. With case laws related to the new additions still unavailable, understanding the intent behind these provisions remains challenging
> Smita Satapathy | ASSISTANT PROFESSOR, ALLIANCE SCHOOL OF LAW

Professors have made efforts to introduce comparative tables and lectures at the start of the semester to help students understand the changes. However, with an enormous syllabus and limited time, this approach proves to be incredibly difficult to implement. Professors are pushed into a situation where they have to keep both old and new textbooks side by side.

"The new batches are starting with a clean slate; senior students, who are learning a mix of old and new laws, are finding it very confusing. There needs to be a gradual transition, not a radical shift, as students also need time to adapt. The Bar Council of India (BCI) must play a crucial role in integrating the new criminal laws into the academia," said Amit Bhaskar, associate professor at Alliance School of Law.

"The sections have been jumbled, rearranged, and merged, and professors have to memorise the new sections, which adds to their overburden," said Prof N Dasharath, principal of University Law College and Department of Studies in Law, Bangalore University.

Professors also acknowledge the helplessness of the situation, recognising it will take decades for the courts to provide authoritative interpretations on various conflicting terms. However, they urge the govt to organise workshops, mock trials, and seminars. They also request that the law ministry issue a statement clarifying the govt's interpretation of these provisions.

"It's very hard to tell students that their question has no answer. By any standard of fairness, there should be a liberal correction. We cannot expect the answer to demonstrate a clear, comprehensive grasp of the subject because none of us have that," said Akshatha Niranjana, assistant professor, St. Joseph's College of Law.
